Do not consume the heart

"Do not consume the heart" is the phrase that inspires this art exhibition, where we explore various nuances of human anguish through the unique expression of twelve watercolor portraits of women. These artworks become intimate portraits that reveal the subtleties and complexities of this emotion, inviting the viewer to immerse themselves in its depth, capturing the fragility and ephemeral beauty that lie within it.

The portrayed characters convey a melancholic expression that evokes a range of subtle emotions, from nostalgia to contemplative serenity. The melancholic expressions on the faces of the depicted women reflect a sense of vulnerability and profound contemplation, delving into a dark realm within the human psyche.

Through each brushstroke and detail, we seek to convey the complexity of anguish, where emotion intertwines with sadness, introspection, and the stillness of the soul. Through visual representation, we aim to establish an intimate connection between the viewer and the protagonists of these artworks, allowing melancholy to serve as a bridge to personal reflection and shared empathy. Each portrait is a window into a unique inner world, reminding us that sadness and beauty often intertwine in the human experience.

This exhibition is a tribute to the depth of emotion and a reminder that even in moments of vulnerability, we find the beauty and connection that shape our shared humanity. Through these watercolors, we delve into the richness of melancholic expression and open ourselves to a deeper understanding of ourselves and others.

Andy S. is a Bolivian visual artist currently based in Curitiba, Brazil. He works mainly with painting, using techniques such as Indian or Chinese ink, oil painting, and watercolor.

Interested in the human psyche and the dark realities that it is capable of creating under the influence of some mental states, often considered taboo in Western society. His work focuses on female figures laden with feelings of melancholy, absence, and a certain existential emptiness, usually placed in contemporary minimalist scenarios.

His creative process is based on the combination of technological tools or the use of software with traditional art techniques.

Special thanks to the cultural center Casa Melchor Pinto and the Cruceña marquetry. This art exhibition would not have been possible without their help.

Contributing to the promotion of art and culture is a very important task for society, since it encourages awareness and moral values through its different forms of expression, providing a meeting point between a sea of perspectives.

Thank you Mom, Dad, Tere, Pabli and Gustavo for your words of support and constant encouragement.
